In Physical and Mental

Ability

WHEN, after a year of dental care, psychological tests were made on the children in a certain Ohio school, it was found that these children had gained 99 and 8.10 % almost double what even the most optimistic of the Committee had predicted. The mental gain was most pronounced, but distinct physical improvement was evident physical improvement was evident physical improvement was evident, in every case, and a spirit of self-respect that overcame the tendency toward trusney and disobedience had developed.
